

PRECISION. SCARCITY. VALUE.

APODCSTORE LUXURY WATCHES INVESTMENT FUND

A curated acquisition and management fund offering exposure to investment-grade luxury timepieces, without the cost or burden of direct ownership.

Managed by ApodcStore.com. Not affiliated with, sponsored by, or endorsed by Rolex, Patek Philippe, Audemars Piguet, Richard Mille, Cartier, Omega, Vacheron Constantin, or any other named manufacturer.

Executive Summary

Apodcstore.com is launching a curated watch acquisition and management fund, offering investors fractional exposure to a professionally managed portfolio of rare, investment-grade timepieces.

The fund acquires, authenticates, and securely stores its holdings, then releases select pieces into resale markets based on timing analysis — balancing short-term flips with long-term appreciation.

Investors gain access to a historically scarcity-driven asset class without the six-figure entry cost of direct ownership.

Reasons to Invest

1

Historical Outperformance

Investment-grade timepieces from top manufacturers have shown strong appreciation over decades.

2

A Growing Global Market

The luxury watch sector continues to expand alongside rising global wealth and resale platform growth.

3

Supply-Restricted Asset Class

Intentional production limits by top manufacturers create persistent secondary-market scarcity.

4

Sector Expertise

Operational experience in luxury goods resale, sourcing, and risk management.

5

Inflation-Resistant & Timeless

Watches don't expire or depreciate like vehicles and have historically held value in downturns.

Why Now

1

Prices Have Stabilized

After the 2021–2022 boom and subsequent correction, prices for major models have leveled — creating conditions for strategic accumulation.

2

Rising Global Collector Base

Demand is rising particularly in the U.S., Middle East, and Asia, where new wealth classes compete for rare pieces.

3

Limited Supply, Sustained Demand

The most coveted models remain backordered for years at retail, continuing to push secondary-market value upward.

“Now is the moment to enter while pricing is reasonable and supply remains controlled.” — as stated in the source offering summary; treat as the manager's opinion, not a verified forecast.

How You Earn

Returns are typically realized at the end of the investment cycle or through structured distributions.

1

Portfolio Appreciation

As watches increase in value, the fund's net asset value (NAV) rises.

2

Strategic Exits & Resale Gains

High-demand pieces may be sold at premium pricing once analysts determine optimal exit conditions.

3

Limited-Edition Flips

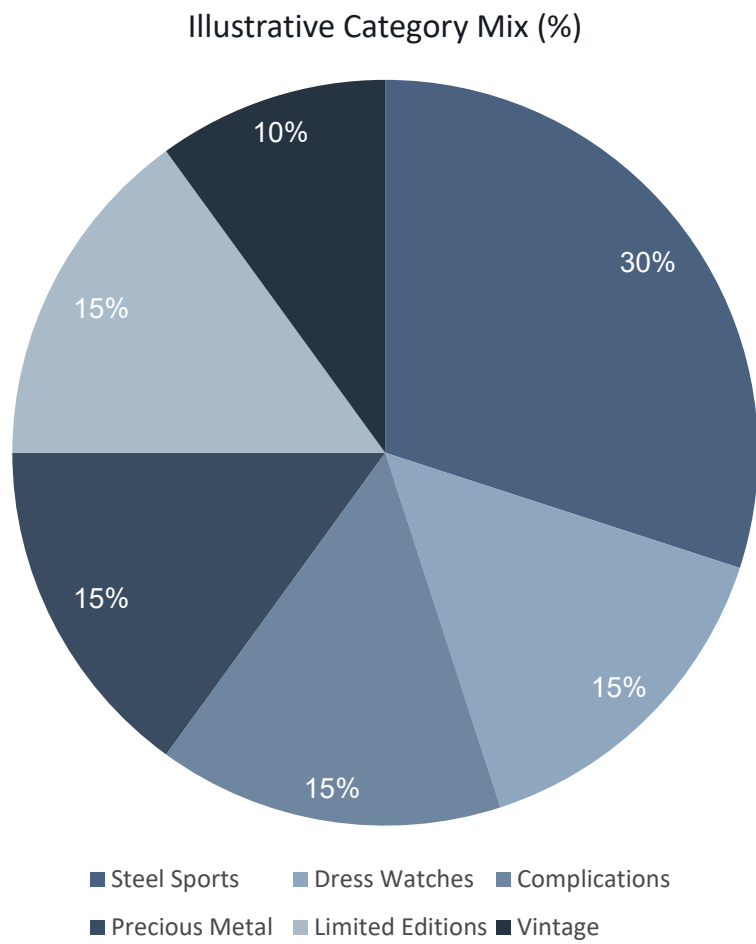

Select models that appreciate quickly after launch may create shorter-term yield opportunities.

4

Diversification Across Brands & Categories

Risk is spread across steel sports, dress, complications, precious metal, limited edition, and vintage models.

Portfolio Diversification

Steel Sports

The most liquid category — highest resale demand and turnover.

Dress & Complications

Slower-moving but historically stable value retention.

Precious Metal & Limited Editions

Higher entry cost, targeted for longer holding periods.

Vintage

Smallest allocation — highest authentication and provenance risk.

Risk Factors

- Illiquidity — resale timing and pricing are not guaranteed and shares themselves may have no secondary market.
- Authentication & counterfeit risk on any acquired timepiece.
- Single-category concentration risk (luxury watches only, no cross-asset diversification).
- Price-cycle risk — the sector experienced a sharp correction as recently as 2022–2023.
- Key-person and operational risk — reliance on an undisclosed team's acquisition and timing judgment.
- Dilution / share-structure risk — see Share Structure flag on the prior slide.
- No guarantee that any target return, distribution, or exit value will be achieved.
